Can kids volunteer?

While it is difficult for kids to volunteer during the day at the Day Center, the "families helping families" approach in the evenings at the congregations lends itself very well to entire families, or parent and child volunteering together. Volunteering with your child is the ultimate "teachable moment" and exposes your child to the importance of service to others, social justice, and diversity. And best yet, the volunteering that kids can do best is playing with kids in the Interfaith Hospitality Network program--so everyone is having a good time.

If you would like to volunteer at a congregation, check to see if your religious congregation is an Interfaith Hospitality Network host or support congregation. If your congregation is not an Interfaith Hospitality Network congregation, and you think it might be something of interest to your congregation, please contact Georgine Getty, (Interfaith Hospitality Network's Executive Director) and your clergy to suggest the idea. Finally, if the above does not apply to you, you can call the Day Center at (513) 471-1100 and the staff there can refer you to a congregation near you that may need volunteers.

How can I volunteer for Interfaith Hospitality Network GC?

If you would like to get involved at Interfaith Hospitality Network's Day Center (hours 7 a.m.-5 p.m.), please see our volunteer opportunities and call the Day Center (513) 471-1100 for an appointment and to discuss ways to help.

Where do your volunteers come from?

Evening volunteers at the congregation mostly come from the host or support congregation. Day Center volunteers sometimes come from our congregations, but are more often referred to us by our website or the United Way's volunteer referral website and phone service (dial 211).
